Tongue & Groove Flooring & Paneling

Collins Pennsylvania Forest

One side paneling

One side flooring

You Really Can Have it Both Ways

It's hardwood, it's tongue & groove, and it's so versatile that one side can be used for paneling or the other for flooring. Aptly named VersaWood, it's also a great choice for cabinets, furniture, benches, and tables. To get just the right look, select from black cherry, red oak, hard maple, or red maple. Perfect for finishing or left natural, VersaWood is easily customized by choosing prime, natural, or rustic grades. It's available in random lengths, 2 3/4" and 5 3/4" width, and 3/4" thickness, and no special tools are needed for application. Plus, you can order VersaWood FSC-certified, which means you can have your cake and eat it, too. In other words, the market's most versatile wood product today, while protecting our forests for tomorrow. Nice combination.

Do the Right Thing

The Collins Companies, a family-owned business, traces its roots back to 1855 when T.D. Collins began timber operations in Pennsylvania. By the turn of the century, the family had expanded west to California and Oregon and by the 1940s had adopted a model of sustainable forestry that is lauded today by the general public and environmental community alike.

That commitment has resulted in all three Collins forests being independently certified by Scientific Certification Systems under the strict rules of the Forest Stewardship Council (FSC). In addition, all offices and manufacturing plants have instituted the principals of The Natural Step, an international environmental organization dedicated to moving people and businesses toward cyclical resource-preserving methods.
